SCALES PRISON WALLS.

Dysert With Bare Hands Climbs 75-Foot Wall

Louisville, Ky., July 22.—G. L. Dysert, a negro prisoner serving a sentence in the workhouse today gained his liberty by the performance of a wonderful feat. The negro, with his hands and feet only, succeeded in scaling the 75-foot stone wall surrounding the prison, a thing that has never before been accomplished and always been considered impossible.

Dysert made his escape and is still at large.

Pulled in Winchester.

Urey Hampton, col., was brought to Madisonville this morning by ex-Mayor I. N. Vickers, who had been deputized to go to Winchester as deputy sheriff and bring him to this city. He is charged with robbing another negro at Nortonville several weeks ago.—Hustler.

National Magazine For August

The National Magazine for August will be found crowded with interesting and timely reading.

In "Affairs at Washington," Joe Mitchell Chapple reflects the general weariness and feeling of relief with which members of both houses closed up the last gaps in imperatively needed legislation, and turned from the struggle of contending interests for recognition, to the homeward journey or the summer outing. Cloak-room anecdotes, senatorial persiflage and references to the principal events of an increasingly strenuous national progress present many tidbits to the appreciative reader.

Sis Hopkins Off on her Honorary.

Cassapolis, Mich., July 23.—At last "Sis" Hopkins has found someone who would do something for her, so she did something for him—she married him!

Yes, it is true. Rose Melville, famous through just one saying: "I ain't a goin' to do nothin' fer nobody that don't do nothin' fer me," was married to her leading man, Frank Minzey, just two weeks ago in the "little church around the corner" in New York. She and her husband are now on their honeymoon at Mrs. Minzey's cottage on the bank of Diamond lake, ten miles from Cassapolis.

It's a regular "Sis" Hopkins honeymoon, too. Just an easy-going vacation time like "Sis" would like. No style. No furbelows. Just lying around in hammocks in loose, cool things, or swimming or canoeing, or riding in a little launch and fishing for bass.

August American Magazine.

The August American Magazine is an achievement in periodical publishing.

In the first place, being a fiction number, it contains some of the best stories that have appeared in any magazine in a long time. John Fleming Wilson writes a splendid sea story of adventure; R. F. Foster, the card expert, contributes a great bridge yarn; David Grayson describes some more of his delightful "adventures in contentment"; Neith Boyce tells a charming love tale; "A Woman," by James Oppenheim, is powerful and compelling, while the story entitled, "Achievement," by the noted English author, J. C. Snaith, is a spellbinder.

Secondly, the more serious features in the magazine are excellently balanced. Another article of the series "Barbarous Mexico" exposes the outrageous treatment of the natives in Mexico by the soldiers of Diaz. It is written by a trained nurse who describes the things she has actually witnessed.

Shopping By Wireless.

A New York department store has ordered a wireless telegraph outfit, which will be installed on the roof of the store, so that passengers of incoming liners may do their shopping by wireless.

SUTHERLAND'S EAGLE EYE SALVE
Good for Nothing but the Eyes.

The SPECTRAL GAMBLER

It was in February, 1881. I was spending the winter season at San Remo and lived in a fine room on the second floor of the Hotel Europe. I used to visit Monte Carlo repeatedly and to play roulette and usually with the same result. I returned to San Remo with empty pockets.

One evening I came back from such an excursion and went to bed with fixed conclusions never again to try the roulette.

Everything in my room was as usual. At the side of my bed stood a little table with a marble top and on this was a china candlestick. At the bottom of the candle and on the top of the candlestick was a round piece of glass through which the candle was stuck.

I noticed that it was in good shape and had no crack when I put a new candle in.

I had a peculiar feeling when I was about to blow the light out. I smelled the smoke of gunpowder and had the idea as if somebody was in the room.

I looked everywhere and could not find anything suspicious or any trace of smoke, and laughing about my own foolishness, I lay down to sleep. But although I was very tired I could not sleep, and half awake and half dreaming, I saw the roulette table before me and many players around it.

One individual, a man who looked like an army officer, attracted my attention. He was pale as a ghost and seemed to try hard to hide his nervousness. He continuously turned the ends of his mustache and when he made his play and placed his money, and the croupier had taken it away he smiled grimly and finally having apparently lost his last five franc piece he rose and left the table.

Then I fell asleep. I dreamed that the man whom I had seen was in my room and looking at me sternly. I saw a little hole in his forehead and a drop of blood coming out of it. Suddenly I woke up. I had heard the sound of falling glass. I made a light and found the glass piece which had been on the candlestick broken in two pieces on the marble plate of the little table. I wondered how this could have happened, as the candlestick was not thrown over by me while I was sleeping and the candle was still sticking in it.

On the next morning I met a friend, a German count, who had a nice villa in the outskirts of the city.

I told him my experience, and he found it very peculiar. Of course I did not tell him of my vision of the roulette table and about my dream.

In a joking kind of way he remarked: "Well, I think the Polish army officer who committed suicide in your room a fortnight ago is probably to blame for the broken glass. He went broke in Monte Carlo and probably wanted to break something in return."

I did not say anything further about the matter, but when I came to my room I investigated the little table carefully and lifted the marble plate. To my surprise I found eight numbers written upon the bottom of it.

Should the dream, the breaking of the glass and the finding of the numbers have a connection? I copied the numbers and went to Monte Carlo to play them.

But I was ashamed of myself, and did not put a silver piece on the table.

The croupier called out "No. 16." That was the first number on my paper slip. I smiled; an accident, I thought. Then came No. 2, the second number on my slip. I was surprised and became so nervous that I could not move. The third number of my slip came, and in succession the rest of the eight.

Now, I was overcome by the thought of having missed the chance to win a fortune.

When I slept in my room the following night I saw the Polish officer again in my dream, and, smilingly extending his hand to me, he said: "Well done, young man. Resist all temptation and let the game alone."

I could not touch a card any more, and once when I was to join in a poker game I felt a cold hand holding mine, and I excused myself. I hope, the poor soul of the suicide may have found its rest.

About Aluminum.

Though aluminum takes first rank among metals for lightness, combined with toughness and durability, it is hardly what one would expect to prove useful as a textile material, but the articles now made from it include neck-cloths, pompadours, shoes, belts, neckties, shawls and hats. Straps and lacings for shoes are among the newest productions. Sleeves or screens from aluminum have proven especially valuable in sugar refining, as it quickly becomes coated with acid, resisting oxide; and it can be woven alone into fabrics for other purposes.

The best results, however, are obtained by employing the aluminum yarn—smooth or twisted—as warp, with colored silk threads for weft. When this cloth is made into cloaks or theatrical costumes the effect is very striking, and the body of a beautiful woman is said to look as though dipped in silver. Fabrics and cloths from glass and silk threads woven together attracted much attention when exhibited in Paris some years ago.
